Louise Gagnon-Arguin est professeure agrégée à l'École de bibliothéconomie et des sciences de l'information de l'Université de Montréal. Elle y enseigne l'archivistique depuis 1985. Elle détient un Ph.D. en histoire de l'Université Laval. Après avoir publié un ouvrage et des articles sur la profession d'archiviste et la discipline archivistique, elle s'est intéressée à la description des documents d'archives et a été membre du Comité canadien de planification sur les normes de description (1990–1995). Ses intérêts de recherche portent sur les études d'usagers (subvention FCAR) et sur le document et le dossier administratif (subvention CRSH). À ce sujet, elle vient de publier un ouvrage en collaboration avec Hélène Vien aux Presses de l'Université du Québec, Typologie des documents des organisations.

Victoria Lemieux is University Archivist, University of the West Indies. Prior to joining the University in 1993, she was Director of Records and Information Services for the City of Edmonton, Government Records Archivist at the Provincial Archives of Alberta, and Government Records Analyst at the Records Management Branch of the Government of British Columbia. She is a graduate of the University of Toronto (Canadian History) and the University of British Columbia's Master of Archival Studies Programme, and is currently pursuing her doctorate in Archive Studies at University College London. She has written a number of articles on archives and records management and regularly undertakes archives and records management-related consultancies for international organizations.

Brian Masschaele is the current Archives Advisor for the Archives Association of Ontario. He has previously held archival positions at the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce Archives, the J.J. Talman Regional Collection at the University of Western Ontario, the Simcoe County Archives, and the National Archives of Canada. He holds a Master of Arts degree in archival studies from the University of Manitoba and an Honours Bachelor of Arts degree in history from the University of Western Ontario.

Robert McIntosh studied at the Universities of Alberta, Strasbourg, Carleton, and Ottawa before joining the Government Archives Division of the National Archives of Canada in 1992. He has published on coal mining, pit boys, sweated needleworkers, and chimney-sweeps. He is currently Senior Policy Officer in the Strategic Planning and Policy Coordination Division of the National Archives of Canada.

Laura Millar received her BA in history from the University of British Columbia in 1981 and her MAS degree from UBC in 1984; she completed her Ph.D. in archival studies at University College London in 1996. For over fifteen years, she has been an editorial and archival consultant based in Vancouver, British Columbia. Her present work focuses on the development of distance education materials in records and archives management for developing countries, for the International Records Management Trust and the International Council on Archives. She also teaches courses on instructional design and curriculum development for distance education, particularly in the developing world.
